HOW DID THEY DO THAT?

Ever wonder how the ball gets inside a whistle? Find out the answer on a special behind-the-scenes tour of Columbus designed to reveal the tricks of “how did they do that” on topics as varied as making wine to growing orchids.

DAY ONE

Meet the expert horticulturists at Franklin Park Conservatory and find out how to develop your own green thumb. Hear stranger-than-fiction stories about orchids. Watch a repotting demonstration and get expert advice on choosing just the right orchid for your home. Visit March through Labor Day to discover how to attract butterflies to your yard all summer long. Be sure to look for the Conservatory’s most colorful displays — vibrant glass art by Dale Chihuly. In fact, it’s the only public botanical garden in the world to own a signature collection of Chihuly’s artwork.

Indulge your sweet tooth during a guided tour of Anthony-Thomas Candy Company, a family-owned confectionery founded in 1952. Watch step by step as chocolate candies are made, starting from the basic ingredients to the final packaging. Taste the results — everyone receives a freshly made chocolate!

Curious about how the ball gets inside a whistle? Solve the mystery at the American Whistle Corporation, the only manufacturer of metal whistles in the nation. You’ll see how whistles are made, starting from a coil of heavy gauge brass to the final chrome-finished product. You’ll even get your own American Classic whistle to take home.

Choose from hundreds of fragrances before pouring your own custom-scented candle at The Candle Lab in Olde Worthington. While the candle hardens, stroll next door to sample a variety of labels before selecting your favorite bottle at House Wine, Columbus Monthly’s Best Wine Bar for 2009. Enjoy dinner across the street at the historic Worthington Inn.

DAY TWO

Explore the North Market, a public market filled with unique shops, fresh food and flowers. You can literally taste your way around the market on a guided tour where you’ll meet local merchants and farmers.

Visit Krema Nut Company, the oldest manufacturer of peanut butter in the country. The reason for its long success? Krema roasts its nuts in small batches by hand — just as it did 100 years ago. Meet the master roaster who’s been with Krema for more than 25 years. Save room for a handful of nuts or one of their tasty PB&J sandwiches.

Enjoy a snack at Graeter’s Ice Cream, where you’ll see ice cream being made from start to finish using a French Pot process that makes just two gallons of ice cream at a time — for the ultimate in creaminess. Or opt to meet Columbus’ award-winning ice cream maker Jeni Britton and hear how she creates exotic flavors like lime cardamom at Jeni’s Splendid Ice Creams. Sample everything on the menu, including her hand-churned flavors and macaroons.

Explore art galleries, antique stores and boutiques in the Short North Arts District. At Camelot Cellars, you can taste wines made with grapes from around the world and create your own wine from start to finish. Begin at the fermentation process, then bottle, cork and even design the label for your own private wine reserve.

DAY THREE

Head east out of Columbus to The Works in nearby Newark. Watch trained glass blowers creating glass art, then blow your own glass ornament or fuse glass for a sun catcher or jewelry.

Weave your own basket with one-on-one help from an expert at Longaberger Homestead in Frazeytsburg. Get inspired by watching the professional basketmakers at work, then peruse the factory store.
